JANUARY TERM

UVA IN LONDON: THE THEATRICAL CITY

London, United Kingdom
ENGL 3990, 3 credits

London’s theatrical culture is famous for its history and its vibrancy. Some of the most gifted playwrights, actors, set designers, and directors in the English-speaking world thrive there today, just as they have for 500 years. In this class we will explore the exciting work produced by today’s most important artists, as well as the rich heritage of performed drama that lies behind it. We will attend as many plays as possible in the course of the term as we focus on what distinguishes London as a “theatrical city”: its history, its approaches to performance and interpretation, and its inexhaustible pleasures.

Accommodation
Students will stay in a hotel near Covent Garden, one of the oldest neighborhoods in the city which is within easy walking distance of London theatres.

Faculty
Stephen Arata, English Department
Lisa Goff, English Department and American Studies Program
